The word landscape in a broad sense that encompasses internal and Skip to Main Content ons, but not necessarily what is visible. The landscape, in a space-time coordinate. We inhabit many linear and non-linear dimensions. The landscape crosses physical, emotional, mental and psychic dimensions, liquifying space and time.

physical, emotional, mental and psychic dimensions, liquifying space and time.

Known for her abstract art, she is a versatile artist who works with different art forms, including painting, photography, object art, installation art, and audiovisual media, all with an abstract approach.

Jardón focuses on ideas, of space. She believes it moves which she later expresses through from the abstract non-existence her art. She creates her artwork by sphere to the concrete existence-combining objects, photographs, concretion sphere. and paintings, treating all of them

According to Jardón, drawing is artistic reality, and her paintings the best way to express the idea are significant because she shares her thought process and expresses her subjectivity through her art.

She uses a single muted color that rejects visible reality and representation without constructing space to achieve this.

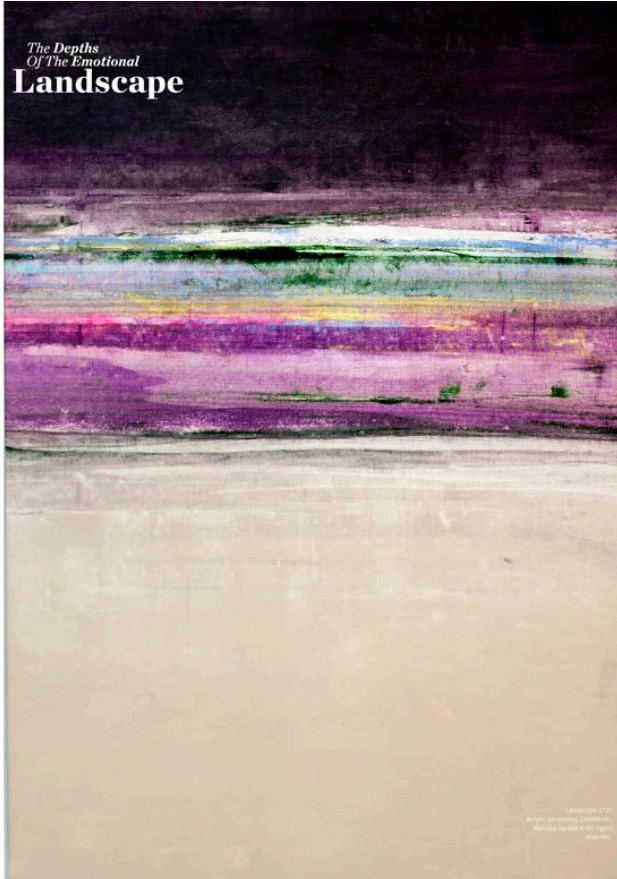

Art enables people to express themselves and recreate their thoughts and emotions.

She believes that experience is a collective phenomenon that goes beyond the individual.

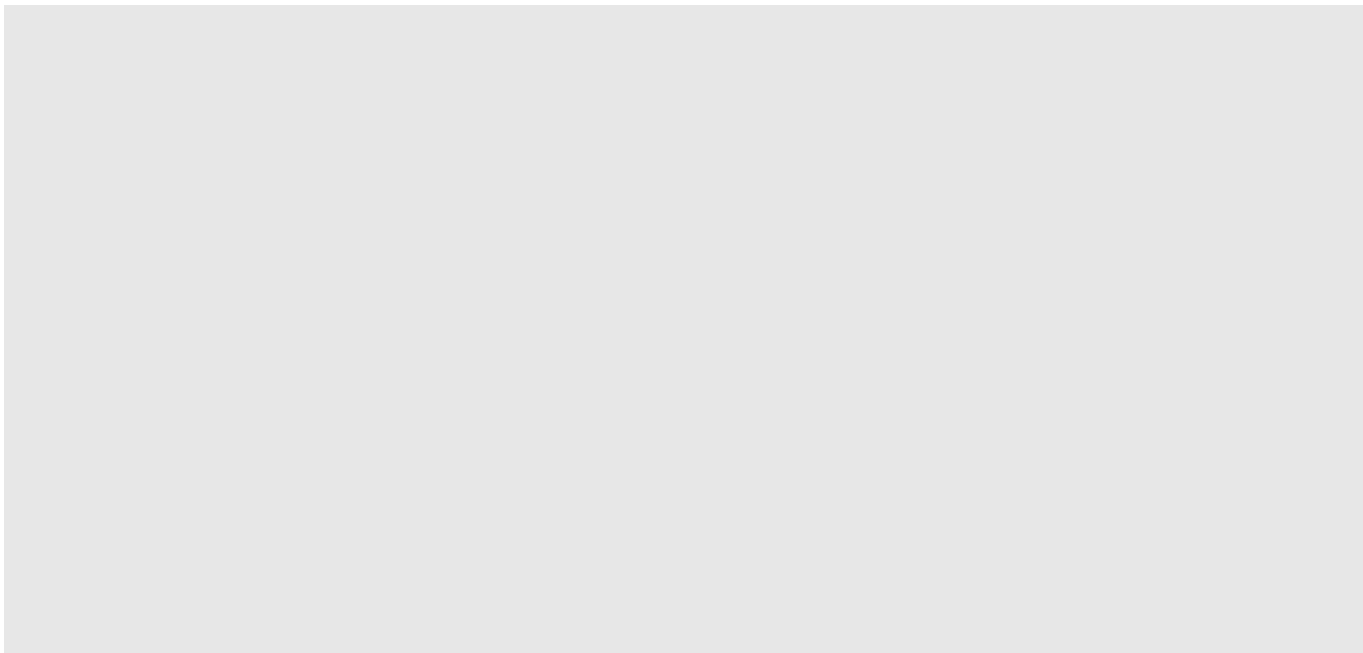

Specific experiences shared by many people over time and in different parts of the world can become embedded in our genetic memory.

This enables us to grasp the essence of what a particular landscape
